

We, the undersigned, are writing to express our concern regarding the Department of Education’s proposed definition of ‘professional degree’ programs, which excludes a plethora of professions including social work. During the passage of the One Big Beautiful Bill Act (OBBBA), Congress used a definition for professional programs that had a limited list of professional degrees, but the definition states that the professional degrees listed include but are not limited to those that can be considered professional degrees.

Social workers are one of the largest professional groups of mental health providers in the United States and play critical roles in child welfare, schools, veterans services, mental health care, services for older adults, services for individuals battling substance use disorders, and more.

Amid the ongoing mental health crisis, access to a social work education is crucial if the country has any chance of providing enough support to the individuals, families, and communities that need mental health care.

As one of the fastest growing professions, social work is expected to have more than 800,000 trained professionals by 2033 but will only reach that goal with full access to student loans so all who are called to the profession are able to go to school and eventually be the social worker their communities need.

We call on the Department of Education to expand the proposed definition of ‘professional degrees’ to include social work.
